JOURNAL OF PLASTIC AND RECONSTRUCTIVE SURGERY AND COSMETIC BOOTCAMP ONLINE SUPPLEMENT NOW AVAILABLE ONLINE

ASPEN, Colo., Feb. 2, 2017 /PRNewswire/ -- The Cosmetic Bootcamp is pleased to announce that its collaborative supplement with the Journal of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery is now available online. The supplement is the result of collaboration between physicians from different specialties and the guidance and direction of Plastic Surgeon, Dr. Rod Rohrich.

The material is available free of charge and demonstrates the relevant anatomy for facial injections. According to Dr. Kenneth Beer this material will "help to provide landmarks and anatomic structures to core injectors" in an effort to help make patient care safer and more effective.

The Cosmetic Bootcamp is the leading training platform for core aesthetic providers and produces educational content live and online. Founded by Dr. Kenneth Beer, Dr. Mary Lupo and Dr. Vic Narurkar more than 12 years ago, The Cosmetic Bootcamp promotes patient safety and optimal outcomes in the use of facial fillers, neuromodulators, lasers and other innovations in aesthetic medicine performed by board certified core cosmetic medicine physicians.
